Why is this so Important?

Up to 20% of women experience a perinatal mood or anxiety disorder (PMAD). Prevention and early intervention can reduce suffering for the entire family. Perinatal mood & anxiety disorders are treatable, yet there are few clinicians who specialize in them. This 2-day course will prepare healthcare professionals to provide appropriate treatment for women suffering with mood or anxiety disorders during pregnancy and postpartum.

TRAINING OBJECTIVES

- Assess prenatal & postpartum risk factors
- Recognize & differentiate between prenatal and postpartum depression, anxiety, panic, OCD, PTSD, and psychosis
- Assess prenatal & postpartum mood & anxiety disorders
- Define psychopharmacology as it relates to perinatal mood & anxiety disorders
- Recognize the impact of perinatal mood disorders on the partner and/or family and role of the family in treatment
- Recognize effective and appropriate treatment modalities
- Measure the importance of social support
